JOSEPH A. SULLIVAN

PRESIDENT

In his 1973 Labor Day message, President Joseph A. Sullivan assessed some of the ills that plague the American economy but reaffirmed his unshakable faith in the future of America. His message follows:

On this Labor Day of 1973, it is difficult to assess the extent of the damage that has been done to the American economy by ravaging elements which have been allowed to run rampant across the land — unemployment, inflation, foreign competition, excessive profits and record-breaking interest rates — while those in authority have done nothing more than try to explain and make empty promises.

The Watergate scandals cannot forever divert the attention of the working people from the seriousness of their economic problems nor from the stalling of those they have elected to office to solve these problems.

In this age of advanced technology, simple logic tells us that unemployment will eventually have to be resolved by the legislating of a shorter work week. This will require an act of Congress. There is no getting around the fact that unfair foreign competition must be met with curbs on imports and restraints on multinational firms that move their operations overseas. This will also require an act of Congress. The curse of inflation will be dispelled only when Government acts to assure the redistribution of excess profits and not allow them to be used only for the creation of new multimillionaires.

Labor Day is not only a day to pause and celebrate the past accomplishments of the American labor movement. It is a day for sober thinking — a day to look ahead. Let's not look back longer than enough to get our bearings. We must determine the results of what we have done in the past twelve months and measure the consequences of what we have failed to do. Only in that way can we plan with confidence for the future.

I, personally, cannot lose faith in the future of America. I believe that the American people — the vast majority of which are working men and women — have the greatest potential for improving living conditions in the world. And on this Labor Day, 1973, as president of a more than half-million-member labor organization, I pledge myself to continue working every day with the members of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, toward the fulfillment of labor's basic objectives — which all add up to social and economic security for all Americans.

In his Labor Day message this year, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin stressed that the American labor movement has always been and must remain the most potent driving force for preserving and improving conditions under which working men and women must live. Following is the full text of his 1973 message:

The working people of America have always felt that there is much about which they can be proud on Labor Day. But in the past several years American working men and women also have had much to worry about.

Every Labor Day in the past, union officials could point with enthusiasm to some giant step taken during the year toward improving the social and economic status of working men and women — steps taken during the New Deal, the Fair Deal, the New Frontiers and the Great Society years — and it was easy then to speak out clearly on the accomplishments of the labor movement.

But it has been difficult in recent years to speak out with any degree of enthusiasm on Labor Day. We have been going through a period of government-planned recessions — originally designed to control inflation — which have year after year worsened the unemployment situation and which, at this time, have not only failed to stop inflation but have brought the price of most consumer goods completely out of reach of the ordinary American consumer.

The American labor movement cannot be indifferent in the face of impending economic disaster. We have been in the past and must continue to be in the future the major force striving to preserve and to improve the conditions under which American workers must live.

The grim shadows hanging over the Nixon Administration must not cause us to lose out way. The American labor movement must not be deterred from demanding action by Congress on measures to create jobs, to curb imports and restrain the exportation of American production, to establish national health insurance, to impose tax reforms, and to work out an economic program to guarantee the stability of the American dollar.

On this Labor Day of 1973, we must pledge ourselves to work during the coming year so that, on Labor Day of 1974, we can once again point with enthusiasm to some giant step taken toward the fulfillment of labor's basic objectives — the achievement of social and economic security for all working men and women in America.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE YEAR

November, 1972

Organized labor's insistence that the Burke-Hartke bill to put curbs on imports and restriction on the exportation of American jobs by multi-national firms should be enacted without delay was once again demonstrated on November 16 by a massive protest staged by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

ILGWU members in Boston left their jobs at 11 a.m. to join with 400,000 others across the country in a demonstration to focus attention on a problem which has cost the garment industry in America the loss of 250,000 jobs in the last ten years.

International Vice President Philip Kramer of the garment union said: "Our members are fighting to preserve their jobs." ILGWU New England Supervisor Edward Milano said the nationwide protest was against a "rising flood of low-wage apparel imports" that threatens the job of every garment worker in the nation.

Several days after the ILGWU demonstration, U. S. Rep. James A. Burke said he would refile the Burke-Hartke bill the first of the year. He warned that the country's trade deficit could jump from an intolerable $3.7 billion recorded in 1971 to $7 billion this year. He pointed out that the amount of imports pouring into this country exceeds exports by about $500 million each month.

"This coming year," he said, "we expect labor to be even more aggressive in their support (of the Burke-Hartke bill) because of the high unemployment and the closing of mills and factories throughout the nation."

He pointed out that Japan alone has a $4 billion trade deficit with the United States. Mere devaluation of the dollar, he said, is "like applying a bandaid to a serious wound."

At the regular meeting of the Massachusetts State Labor Council on November 16, the Council's legislative program for 1973 was discussed. Both Senate President Kevin B. Harrington and House Speaker David M. Bartley made a brief appearance to discuss the tentative program based on resolutions adopted by the Council's Fifteenth Annual Convention in October and to pledge their continued support for labor's social and economic objectives.

Both congratulated the Council for the role it played in adding Democratic seats to both branches of the General Court and both promised to do what they could to get roll calls on labor bills so that accurate voting records of candidates could be made available to union members during election campaigns.

Speaking at a Parker House press conference on November 6, President Joseph A. Sullivan threw the support of the Massachusetts State Labor Council behind the call for construction of the Southwest Expressway. Pointing out that with the unemployment rate in Massachusetts far above the national average making it a necessity for the Governor to go ahead with the project, he added: "He cannot ignore the fact that 20,000 permanent, new jobs will come from the construction of the Southwest Expressway. And he cannot ignore the fact that its construction will put over 3,000 construction workers a year to work just in that area alone."

A group of Boston businessmen, labor leaders and builders at the conference claimed that if the Southwest Expressway is not built, the Southwest Corridor region will miss the opportunity to pick up nearly 10,000 permanent, new jobs and will face the postponement of another 10,000 jobs for at least five years.

On November 29, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin addressed the Nichols College Economics Club in Dudley, Mass. He spoke on the subject of economy in general and particularly on the subject of foreign imports as they affect the American economy.

January, 1973

In a statement issued January 16, President Joseph A. Sullivan stated that the reaction of Massachusetts labor leaders to President Nixon's sudden abolition of wage and price controls was pretty much the same as that of other labor leaders throughout the country, a reaction which reflects the thoughts expressed by AFL-CIO President George Meany immediately after the controls were lifted. He added that the AFL-CIO had almost consistently criticized the manner in which controls had been administered under Phase 1 and Phase 2 of the Nixon Administration's policies, on the basis that prices had not been kept in line while unions were restricted to unrealistic wage patterns.

In a New Year's statement prepared especially for one of the Boston dailies, Massachusetts AFL-CIO President Joseph A. Sullivan stressed the need for greater coordination of efforts in the difficult transition we must eventually make from a wartime to a peacetime economy.

"It is with mixed feelings that we of the American labor movement greet the year 1973.

"It is traditional, of course, for statements made at the beginning of a new year to be steeped in optimism and filled with great expectations of greater prosperity and stability and the promise of better days immediately ahead. But I, for one, believe that the state of the American economy as we enter the new year leaves little room for general platitudes.

"There is no doubt that the year 1973 will bring some changes — but whether these changes will be for better or worse depends on the mettle of the leadership the American people elected in November, on the acumen of business and banking interests in dealing with long-range economic problems, and on how successful the American labor movement is in maintaining the strength that has enabled it in the past to play a major role in the building of the highest standards ever achieved by any nation on earth.

"In 1973, the American labor movement will cooperate fully in all honest and sincere efforts to stabilize the economy — but we will continue to resist any attempt to undermine the gains we have made or to degrade the living and working standards we have achieved over two years.

COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan announced that more than $20,000 in scholarships ranging from $100 to $1,000 will be awarded in the Massachusetts State Labor Council's 1973 Scholarship Program. The awards include the $1,000 John F. Kennedy Memorial Scholarship, the $1,000 Francis E. Lavigne Memorial Award, both given by the Council, and the $1,000 John F. Tracy Memorial Scholarship given by the International Brotherhood of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers.

The officers of the Massachusetts State Labor Council were saddened on January 11 when they received word that one of their long-time colleagues, James R. McCarthy of Greenfield, had died at his home after a short illness.

HIGHLIGHTS...

February, 1973

President Joseph A. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin, Executive Vice Presidents Daniel F. Murray and Joseph D. McLaughlin, along with COPE Director John A. Callahan were among the many labor officials who attended the Operating Committee Meeting held in Bal Harbour, Florida, from February 19 to February 21, simultaneously with the regular meeting of the National AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting at which President Nixon made a personal appearance.

Although the President's announcement that he would ask Congress for broad powers to negotiate foreign trade agreements to safeguard the national interest was warmly received and termed an "attractive" idea by President George Meany, the labor groups sharply assailed the President for his domestic policies, particularly what labor sees as the "dismantling" of the nation's social programs. The AFL-CIO Council warned that the Nixon Administration is planning to terminate millions of dollars in social programs designed "to strengthen American society and improve the quality of life," and that these programs are endangered by "a combination of presidential vetoes, the impoundment of appropriated funds, program reductions and terminations and revenue sharing."

When a letter addressed to Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin from the office of President George Meany asking the cooperation of the Council in a letter-writing campaign to prevent adoption by the Health, Education and Welfare Department of a regulation which would impose gross injustices on striking workers and their families, the Council immediately responded.

The Social and Rehabilitation Service of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had been given two alternative regulations to choose from by the first of February pertaining to assistance to families of striking workers. Alternative (A), supported by the Chamber of Commerce, would have provided the Chamber with an effective tool to deny assistance to strikers and their families. Alternative (B), supported by the AFL-CIO, would prevent states from discriminating against needy strikers and their families by establishing need as the sole criterion for determining eligibility for assistance.

A letter was sent to the Administrator of the Social Rehabilitation Service urging him to adopt Alternative (B), and prominent figures, including the Governor, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, were asked to send similar letters.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council in Bal Harbour on February 21 warned that "A total breakdown in the health care delivery system is just around the corner" unless comprehensive reform is undertaken in this Congress.

The Council said that the only realistic and workable solution is the national health security bill sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Rep. Martha Griffiths of Michigan.

"The Kennedy-Griffiths bill," the Council asserted, "is keyed to the basic goals of universal coverage, strong and effective cost controls, comprehensive benefits, equitable financing through social insurance and broad reforms."

The health security measure is the "health care program America needs," the Council said, adding that "there can be no higher priority than the health of the American people."

OUR SYMPATHIES

The officers and members of the Massachusetts State Labor Council were grieved by the news of the passing of TWUA N.E. Regional Director Harold D'Aoust, who died at the Memorial Hospital in Nashua, N.H. on Saturday, February 24, after an extended period of illness. Profound and sincere condolences are extended to his family on behalf of the entire membership of the State Labor Council.

The annual Labor Institute at the Highpoint Motor Inn in Chicopee on April 5 and 6 was even more successful than had been anticipated. With over 230 delegates in attendance, the Institute went perfectly as scheduled and the interest of the delegates in the subjects discussed was strongly evidenced by the serious questions they posed to the invited speakers throughout the sessions.

President Joseph A. Sullivan set the keynote for the Institute in an address delivered at the opening luncheon on April 5, in which he touched on most subjects to be discussed. He pointed out that the film, The Rise of Labor, which was to be shown at the start of the first session, was an appropriate opening as it would "serve to remind us of our purpose as labor people and to impress upon us that to achieve our goals and reach our objectives, we must be prepared to keep on fighting uphill battles."

PRESIDENT JOSEPH A. SULLIVAN delivering keynote address at Labor Institute on April 5. Seated on the left is Harry Van Arsedale, Treasurer of the Int'l Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, making notes for one of the main speeches he was to deliver, and on the right is Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin.

In strong appeals to both the Governor and the Legislature, the Executive Officers of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, urged delay of the reorganization plans proposed by the Governor in order to avoid the waste that could result from haste.

The Governor had asked the Legislature to drop everything else so that his reorganization plan could be passed by June 30 but the officers of the Council urged the General Court not to succumb to the pressure but to give the Governor's proposals careful and thorough attention at a proper and reasonable pace.

Nick Jones, New England Organizer for the United Farm Workers, speaking at the Labor Institute in Chicopee, appealed to central labor bodies and local unions in Massachusetts to schedule United Farm Workers speakers to appear at local meetings. He pointed out that the plight of farm workers, children as well as adults, in the grape and lettuce fields of California, has to be thoroughly understood by all union members to inspire the kind of help that is needed to provide these workers with full union protection.

May-June 1973

More than seven hundred people were in the Imperial Ballroom of the Statler-Hilton Hotel in Boston on Saturday evening, May 19, to honor Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin for his distinguished service in the labor movement and his active involvement in civic and governmentla affairs affecting working people.

Outstanding among the invited guests was former Speaker of the House of Representatives John W. McCormack, who lavishly praised labor leaders such as Loughlin who, throughout his forty-two years in Congress, supported and helped liberal members of Congress to push through progressive legislation, particularly through the productive years of the Franklin D. Roosevelt New Deal era. He stressed that had it not been for the intensive and relentless fights staged by organized labor in the past, the great strides being made currently in social and economic legislation would not be possible.

Local 718 of the Boston Firefighters recently won a $1 million arbitration decision against the City of Boston. Commenting on the decision on May 23, President Joseph H. Hardiman of the local said: "The Boston Firefighters Local 718, AFL-CIO, is very pleased with the decision of Arbitrator Daniel G. MacLeod in awarding the firefighters of Boston the same longevity pay previously given by the City of Boston the the patrolmen."

Nearly a hundred new counselors were graduated at Exercises held on June 4, 1973, in the Adams Room of the Mason Building in Boston after completing the eight-week union counseling course sponsored by the Massachusetts State Labor Council in cooperation with the United Way of Eastern Massachusetts.

1973 SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS

About sixty-three seniors from high schools throughout the state won awards ranging from $100 to $1,000 in the 1973 Scholarship Program of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO. On the list of winners released by COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan were the following top winners:

Laurie C. McKenna of Lynn English, the John F. Kennedy Memorial Scholarship of $1,000; Joanne A. Ahola of Quincy High, the Francis E. Lavigne Memorial Award of $1,000; William Cullinan of Cathedral High in Springfield, the John F. Tracy Memorial Scholarship of $1,000 given by the Mass. State Conference of Bricklayers; Patricia A. Connally of Lynn English, the Salvatore Camelio Memorial Award of $500; Mary O'Brien of Lynn English, the $500 Scholarship given by the American Income Life Insurance Company; Robert Spencer of Stoughton, the $500 Francis E. Lavigne Award of the Brockton Central Labor Council; Robert Waddick of Waltham High, the Salvatore Pavone Scholarship of $500 given by Local 560 of the Laborers International Union; and Judith A. McGrath of Norwood High, the $500 Scholarship given by Boston Local 1291 of the Retail Clerks.

On June 1, Insurance Commissioner John G. Ryan issued a decision which was hailed by the Massachusetts State Council as a step eventually leading to acceptance of the two-thirds benefit concept in Workmen's Compensation.

"The way is now cleared," said President Joseph A. Sullivan in a statement released June 21st, "for the Legislature to establish adequate compensation benefits for injured working people and their widows and orphans without putting an unfair burden of cost on Massachusetts employers. Ryan's decision insures that more of the premium dollar will go into benefits, and that increases in benefit levels will not result in a profit windfall for insurers."

July-August, 1973

As the result of a briefing by J. William Belanger, Assistant Regional Manpower Administrator for the U.S. Department of Labor, at the August meeting of the State Labor Council, a letter signed by President Sullivan and Secretary-Treasurer Loughlin went out to all affiliated locals advising them that temporary jobs for many unemployed, underemployed and students in some areas of Massachusetts will be available through September and October.

President Joseph A. Sullivan told 150 labor representatives gathered at the Statler-Hilton Hotel in Boston on August 7 that it was their duty "as friends of organized labor" to throw their full support behind the United Farm Workers in their long struggle to achieve simple justice in the grape vineyards and lettuce fields on the West Coast.

Cesar Chavez, head of the United Farm Workers had told the group: "I come to you from four weeks of the most bloody strikes—our blood." He was referring to the latest in a series of grower-teamster attacks on the United Farm Workers.

President Joseph A. Sullivan of the State Labor Council will serve as Labor Participation Chairman in the first United Way of Massachusetts Bay campaign, scheduled to begin on September 9. He will be coordinating the United Way campaign among organized labor in the area.

The new United Way emerged from the former Massachusetts Bay United Fund and United Community Services structure supporting the needs of 209 health, family, child-care and youth agencies which annually help over one million Eastern Massachusetts residents.

HIGHLIGHTS...

September-October, 1973

All incumbents on the 35-man Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, who made a bid for re-election, were swept back into office by overwhelming votes, even in the several spots where there were contests, by the nearly one thousand delegates to the Sixteenth Annual Convention, held at the Statler-Hilton Hotel in Boston from Tuesday, October 2, through Friday, October 5, 1973.

President Joseph A. Sullivan of the Meatcutters in Natick, who has won the respect of members throughout the state with his able handling of the responsible position which is the presidency of a half-million member organization, won over his opponent, Michael Botelho of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, by a nearly four to one majority.

Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin of the Hotel, Restaurant and Bartenders Union, who has held the post since February 1, 1962, defeated Jean Joseph Michaud of the Musicians by the same margin.

Executive Vice Presidents Daniel F. Murray and Joseph D. McLaughlin were re-elected without opposition.

THE ONE THOUSAND DELEGATES to the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, were treated to a rare occasion with the appearance of former Speaker of the House of Congress on the first day of the Convention. Old timers among the delegates may have remembered Congressman John W. McCormack of the then Twelfth Congressional District addressing conventions of the former Massachusetts Federation of Labor or the Former Massachusetts State CIO Council, but to the majority of the delegates to this Convention of the 15-year old merged organization it was a first to hear this old champion of the poor and the oppressed deliver a fiery 43-minute appeal to reason. Shown leading the standing ovation that greeted him are (left to right) Executive Vice President Joseph D. McLaughlin; Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin; President Joseph A. Sullivan; and Vice President John W. Prendergast in the background.

A RATHER SOLEMN MOMENT of the Sixteenth Annual Convention was the presentation of a plaque, prepared as a tribute to the late President Salvatore Camelio, to his family. The presentation appeared to have raised a lump in many a throat among the delegates — and this in itself was a well-deserved tribute to a man who dedicated his entire adult life to the American labor movement. Embossed on the plaque held by his son, Attorney Augustus Camelio, are the words: "He lived with concern for his fellowmen, And worked each day toward a better plan, To ease the burden that the workingman, Has carried daily since the world began." Others in the picture are left to right: Vice President Guy Campobasso, Vice President Helen T. O'Donnell, Executive Vice President Daniel F. Murray, Mrs. Angela Camelio, President Joseph A. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin and Vice President Vincent DiNunno.

Heading the list of distinguished figures who addressed the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Massachusetts State Labor Council were U.S. Senators Edward M. Kennedy and Edward W. Brooke. Both assailed the Nixon Administration's fiscal policies and deplored the ugly scandals in which the Administration has become involved.

Kennedy called the Nixon policies a "fundamental mismanagement of the economy" and pointed out that we now have "the highest rate of inflation since the Korean War, the highest unemployment rate in ten years, and the highest interest rates since the Civil War." Brooke called the Nixon Russian wheat deal "ineptly planned" and labeled as unwise the decision to curb American wheat production while selling to the Russians.

Senator Kennedy in his address revealed that an effort will soon be made in Congress to include a revamping of the Social Security payroll tax in the general income tax reform plans which has been given a high priority.

"My hope is," said the Senior Senator from Massachusetts, "is that in the coming weeks, Congress will make its intention clear to give payroll tax reform the same high priority already reserved for income tax reform, and that we will include payroll tax reform as part of the comprehensive tax reform legislation planned for early next year. Only in this way can we bring real tax justice to every citizen, and end the unjust reign of the payroll tax."

In his address, Senator Brooke talked about inflation and its causes but could not see how the working poor can be blamed for it.

"This year," he said, "we have seen the Senate pass and the House expedite an excellent beginning to pension reform while the President vetoed the long overdue minimum wage increase.

"I am pleased that at long last pension reform appears to be on the way to realization, but I am dismayed that the President of the United States can subscribe to a national policy that keeps millions of workers in poverty in order to combat inflation. It is unconscionable that those who benefit the least from our economy should be asked to pay the greatest price for stabilizing it.

WHAT'S MASSPORT DONE FOR YOU LATELY?

Just ask any of the over 11,000 union men and women who have helped us develop the Port of Boston, Logan International Airport, and Hanscom Field.

Or any of the workers currently rebuilding the road beds on both levels of the Tobin Memorial Bridge.

In fact, since 1959, Massport has invested $447 million in various construction and development projects.

And we're really just beginning. Because to keep the economies of Boston and New England moving, it's going to take a lot more work.

And a lot more jobs.

STUMBLE ON THE TREADMILL THIS MORNING?

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States

An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

It's a good sign. You're probably beginning to realize that your "promising position" has leveled out into a routine job. Equitable is looking for highly motivated individuals who won't settle for treadmills...who want a more rewarding outlet for their initiative. A career in life insurance sales could be the answer. During the first three years of training you'll receive a combination of salary and commissions. After that, you'll be on your own to set your own pace, work as hard as you like, earn as much as you please.

Remember, tomorrow the treadmill rolls again. If you think you're going to stumble, call me to arrange an interview today.

It's difficult to choose between a college that gives you a good education and one that prepares you for a solid professional career.

It's also unnecessary.

Massachusetts College of Pharmacy offers a five-year curriculum leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Pharmacy, as well as graduate programs leading to the degrees of Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy.

And while we can't guarantee you a job after graduation, we can provide you with the imposing statistic that in the past 10 years 100% of our graduates (men and women) who wanted jobs in pharmacy, got jobs in pharmacy.

People have been saying the same old thing about us for years.

Since the Charlestown Savings Bank started way back in 1851, we've seen the number of people saying "that's my bank" grow from just a handful to over 200,000. And we've been growing right along with them.

We've added more banking offices. Now we have 11 of them conveniently located around Boston.

200,000 depositors, $680,000,000 in assets. Not bad for a little bank that started with one office in Charlestown. We're proud to hear people say "that's my bank," and the best part is, they're proud to say it.
